AN EXPORT QUIZ FOR THE BUSINESSMAN.

1. What are the economic, political, and cultural variables you must consider?
2. How do you check the credit standing of foreign buyers?
3. How will exchange control affect your operation?
4. How do you protect yourself from foreign exchange fluctuations?
5. What are the alternatives open to your company for export financing?
6. Are you familiar with the alternative methods of collecting receivables from abroad?
7. How do you maximize your profit; through export, licensing or direct investment?

The purpose of all these questions is to emphasize that a foreign market can be exactly that–foreign. A market without all the answers.

And at the Royal Bank of Canada, we know that the answers to these questions aren't so simple that they can be completely explained in a single ad.

That's where the Royal Bank's expertise comes in. We have, International Centres across Canada that can give you these answers…and more. And they're all available through your local Royal Bank branch manager, or by phoning any of the International Centres below.

When you succeed…we succeed.

In a competitive world, EDC helps you get the business... and the jobs.

Exporting is this country's lifeblood.

But international competition is keen.

So EDC – a commercial enterprise owned by the Government of Canada – supports financially some 40 per cent of Canada's shipments of capital goods and related services to markets abroad (excluding the U.S.).

In doing so, our programs remove financial obstacles for companies interested in exporting – so that they can compete and win business through superior technology, quality, price and service.

We want to see more export activity – among Canadian companies, both large and small, and their thousands of suppliers – to benefit the economy here at home.

EDC's job is to keep those exports expanding and to help your business profit from them. Because growing exports mean more jobs for Canadian workers.

Isn't it time you started consigning all your shipments between the St. Lawrence and the Pacific to Reimer Express?

Commerce Court, Toronto, Canada. Headquarters for one of the world's largest banks.

One good idea led to another.

Over 100 years ago, we saw Canada's need for financial backing to develop her rich natural resources. That was our first good idea. Today, we have over 1,700 branches from the Atlantic to the Pacific and over $42 billion in assets. During the last 100 years, we've helped a lot of little businesses become big businesses, and we've seen a lot of good ideas become realities.

While we were helping Canadians, we didn't forget about the rest of the world. We set up offices and helped businessmen in London, New York, Frankfurt, Milan, Paris, Zurich, Bahrain, Hong Kong, Singapore, Tokyo, Sydney, Mexico, the Caribbean and other financial centres throughout the world. Today, we are one of the world's largest banks. Our first good idea has led to a lot of other good ideas throughout Canada and around the world. The Canadian Manufacturer's Association, the spokesman for manufacturers of every size and kind in Canada, is structured regionally and locally as well as nationally.

The Association's seven regional Divisions and 33 local Branches are autonomous and initiate action within their own jurisdictions. Their elected representatives participate fully in policy making for the Association as a whole.

The full resources of the CMA are behind the regional Divisions, each of which has its own office and staff and complements the national body in the work of serving manufacturers.

COMMENT SE SERVIR DE L'INDEX COMMERCIAL CANADIEN

Il est divisé en 8 sections:

1. Les annonces majeures — pagination précédée de la lettre A (papier blanc). Dans les sections B et D, on trouve des références à ces annonces majeurs après le nom de l'entreprise.
2. Index des manufacturiers — pagination précédée de la lettre B (papier vert).

   C'est dans cette section que se trouvent l'adresse et le numéro de téléphone tant du siège social que des succursales et des points de vente d'une entreprise ainsi que le nom et le titre de ses principaux directeurs.

   Elle comporte en outre le nom de ses: filiales, principaux produits, marques commerciales, contacts en matière d'exportation, codes Telex/TWX. Elle en indique aussi la taille.
3. Section géographique — pagination précédée de la lettre C (papier rose). Si au cours d'un déplacement vous voulez connaître les manufacturiers de la région où vous vous trouvez, c'est cette section qui vous les indiquera. Ils sont énumérés alphabétiquement premièrement par province et deuxièmement par municipalité.
4. Index des produits — pagination précédée de la lettre D (papier vert). Lorsque vous êtes à la recherche d'un produit spécifique, c'est cette section qu'il vous faut consulter car elle comporte l'énumération alphabétique de 10,000 catégories de produits fabriqués au Canada accompagnées du nom et de la localisation des fabricants. Vous y trouverez toutes les indications voulues pour identifier le produit désiré. Comme complément, cette section comporte des annonces fournissant des détails supplémentaires concernant les marchandises énumérées. Les maisons intéressées à l'exportation sont identifiables grâce à l'astérisque qui en précède le nom. La page D-2 contient tous les détails pouvant vous en faciliter la consultation.
5. Produits destinés à l'agriculture — pagination précédée de la lettre E (papier jaune).

   Index de tous les fabricants de tels produits.
6. Section des services — pagination précédée de la lettre F (papier blanc). Cette section énumère plusieurs services destinés aux manufacturiers: service du gouvernement fédéral en matière de commerce extérieur, courtiers en douane, transporteurs (par route, messagerie, lignes aériennes ou maritimes), spécialistes en matière de transport, banques canadiennes à charte, maisons d'exportation, etc.
7. Glossaire français ou espagnol — pagination précédée de la lettre G (papier vert).

   Afin d'aider le lecteur qui ne maîtrise pas l'anglais, ces pages donnent l'équivalent anglais des produits qui y sont alphabétiquement énumérés en français ou en espagnol, produits dont les sections D et E fournissent tous les détails.
8. Section des marques de commerce — pagination précédée de la lettre H (papier blanc).

   Lorsque vous connaissez un nom commercial sans savoir qui fabrique le produit en question, consultez cette section. Référez-vous ensuite à la section B pour obtenir tous les renseignements relatifs à l'entreprise.

TRADE MARKS, TRADE NAMES OR BRANDS

is a list of trade marks or brand names used in Canada following type of products and names of Canadian manufacturers using them. We believe this list to be as comprehensive as any such list published in Canada. We have made every effort to be accurate. However, we are relying on the good faith of the companies that have voluntarily submitted the information and we are not in a position to verify the accuracy of these submissions. The trade marks listed are not necessarily registered in the Trade Marks Office under the Trade Marks Act. In cases where two or more companies are listed as using the same trade mark for similar products, we will delete a duplicate trade mark whenever the exclusive owner provides us with legal proof of his exclusive ownership. Under no circumstances can legal responsibility be assumed by the Canadian Trade Index and/or The Canadian Manufacturers' Association for any errors, omissions or duplications in these listings.

What is a Trade Mark?

It's a mark used to distinguish the wares or services sold, leased, hired or performed by one person from those of another. If you want to protect that mark against infringement you must register it in accordance with the provisions of the Trade Marks Act. The trade mark that would distinguish one line of wares or services from another may be a picture, a label, a package, a container, the shape of the article or simply a word or series of words. Since the use of words is the most common method of distinguishing one item or service from another, words registered as trade marks are often referred to somewhat loosely as "trade names" or "brand names". However, a trade name generally means the name under which a business is carried on. Because of the possibility of confusion, the safe and accepted legal term is simply "trade mark".

Do You Have to Register Your Trade Mark

No, you do not have to register your trade mark with the Federal Trade Marks Office but if someone else uses the same or a confusingly similar trade mark you will not be able to sue for infringement. You would, nevertheless, if not registered, have recourse against the infringer if you could prove that the defendant was attempting to pass off his goods or services as if they were yours. If your trade mark was registered, all you would have to do is prove that the same or similar mark was actually used and was confusing with yours.

Registration, furthermore, enables you to legally stop any act or activity that depreciates the goodwill value of your registration. The registered mark is also incontestable after five years. This means that if prior use of the trade mark was unknown to you at the time you obtained registration, the aggrieved party cannot obtain its cancellation once the five years period has elapsed.

What Trade Marks Are Registrable?

The general rule is that subject to certain exceptions you can register any trade mark that (a) has been in use or has been made known, (b) that is distinctive and (c) that will not be susceptible of confusion with other trade marks. This general rule, however, has many provisos because of the court's interpretation of the Trade Marks Act, and various International Trade Mark Conventions.

"Use" means to sell in normal trade in such a way that notice of the association of a trade mark with the wares is at that time given to the purchaser. Simply giving advance publicity does not constitute use. The sale of samples bearing the trade mark is not deemed to be use "in the normal course of trade" and is thus insufficient for registration purposes. A trade mark is not distinctive if used by more than one person unless, of course, the other person was properly licensed by the registered trade mark owner. Even if the mark was originally distinctive it may have lost distinctiveness prior to your application for registration if the name has fallen into the language and become essentially descriptive of the product.

Once Registered, Keep Your Trade Mark Alive

A registered trade mark lasts only as long as it is used but "using" has its own particular meaning in trade mark law. A trade mark must be used strictly as a trade mark. For example, be wary of how you use it in an advertising context. Remember that a trade mark is to distinguish your wares or services from those of another. If you use your mark in advertising as though it symbolised a class of merchandise you are not "using" your trade mark. Still worse, you might be inviting the public to apply a new meaning to what you thought was your own distinguishing trade mark so that it falls into the language and becomes essentially descriptive of the class of product. Once the latter position is reached your trade mark may no longer be registrable.

BEWARE:

THE SUBJECT OF TRADE MARKS IS A SPECIALIZED ONE. EXPERTS IN THIS FIELD ARE COMMONLY KNOWN AS TRADE MARK ATTORNEYS OR AGENTS. SEEK THEIR ADVICE BEFORE MAKING DECISIONS.
